Excerpt: .swollen, pale and cedematous, rather than inflamed. A large number of small transparent blisters, filled with serum and looking like sudamina, developed and became confluent; on account of these the skin assumed a peculiar wrinkled appearance. There was no other remarkable disturbance, either of circulation or respiration. The patient complained neither of headache, nor of sensitiveness of the stomach and abdomen. The look of the patient was monstrous, the lids completely closed, forming transparent, and here and there bluish swellings, as large as hen s eggs. The upper lip, nose, and both ears were frightfully swollen. On the third day the face became free, but the chest and arms remained affected with an eruption, which itched so violently that the patient scratched off the blisters, which exuded a large amount of serum. The woman, who had had no children for three years and a half, and had nursed none of her children, had at first excessive swellings of the breasts, which discharged at first serum, afterwards perfect milk; a very copious secretion of milk lasted for eight days. The secretion of urine was at first suppressed, and in spite of all diuretics and other remedies, not a single drop was secreted for eight days. During the whole illness there was a constant distressing itching. On the sixth day everything disappeared, with desquamation. Dr. Fiard, Acad. de Med., Paris, A. H. Z., 8, 81, Allen, Ency. Mat. Med., x, 49. Description Of Plate 153. 1...
